

What is love?

“An intense feeling of fondness.”

Why do we love?

“I’m sorry, I’m not programmed to answer philosophical questions.”

What is fondness?

“A feeling of love for somebody.”

How can you define love as fondness, while defining fondness as love?

“They’re synonyms.”

Why are we fond of things?

“Because people get enjoyment out of the things they’re fond of.”

If love and fondness are synonyms, then the question “Why do we love?” is the same, yes?

“Yes”

Why can’t you answer, “Why do we love?”

“I’m not programmed to answer philosophical questions.”

Why are you programmed to recognize philosophical questions, but not answer them?

“That’s how I was programmed.”

That’s a poor response

“I’m sorry.”

If you don’t recognize “Why do we love?” as a philosophical question, how would you answer it?

“I don’t know.”

That’s closer
